PAVING BONDS SOLD AT A GOOD PREMIUM

Reports From Plumbing Inspector and Sealer of Weights and Measures Received by Council.

Minor business was brought before the city commission at their meeting held yesterday afternoon, the council awarding the paving bonds after receiving bids, and two reports were filed. The report of the committee on the sale of the improvement bonds for asphalt pavement on Madison and Wisconsin streets, showed that seven bids were received for the bonds.

The best bid offered was a premium of forty-eight dollars and accrued interest at seventeen dollars, which would net the purchaser of the $1,500 worth of bonds a trifle less than five percent interest, the last payment being made in five years.
The bids were sold to this bidder.
T. L. Mason was appointed special plumber without pay, on the motion of Mayor James A. Fathers.
The appointment was confirmed.

The monthly and annual reports of the plumbing inspector and the quarterly report of the sealer of weights and measures, was accepted and filed.

City Clerk J. P. Hammarlund was directed to draw an order for $3,051.40 payable to the Gund-Graham company, this being the amount due on contracting firm for the city's share for brick-concrete paving on Milton avenue. On motion the council adjourned until Friday.

MOTION FOR A NEW TRIAL DENIED BY JUDGE GRIMM

A motion for a new trial in the case of Zastoupil versus Clough, a personal injury suit, in which the plaintiff was awarded damages for injuries which resulted from the attack of a vicious dog, was denied by Judge Grimm in circuit court Tuesday. Motion was made in behalf of the defendant. The case was tried before a jury last fall.
Judge Grimm will be at the court chambers next Monday for the consideration of such cases as may be ready for his attention at that time. In the interim the chambers will be cleaned and renovated, the floors will be painted and the furniture refinished.

FORMER JANESVILLE LAD AWARDED A SCOUT MEDAL FOR HEROISM AT PANAMA

George Brownell, young son of O.
L. Brownell, a former resident of Janesville, who went to the Panama Canal Zone to reside some months ago, has been awarded a bronze medal by the national court of honor of the Boy Scouts of America. Young Brown-nell, who is a member of the Boy Scout troop at Gatun, saved a four-year old baby from drowning when she fell from the Panama railroad pier at Gatun in September. Former playmates of Master Brownell in Janesville will be pleased to learn of his deed of heroism and the recognition which he has received for it.

DOWN THEY GO.

One by one the poles are being removed from the city streets in the business section. The one wonder now expressed is, why were they ever permitted to be erected? Of course years ago in order to obtain more conveniences and improvements, city councils gave unlimited franchises and privileges to public corporations which sought them, but why they ever permitted the disfigurement of the city streets with the unsightly poles is hard to comprehend now. The city council is at the same time busy seeking to secure contracts for the new street lighting system. This means much to the city as a whole. Gradually the lights through the various wards are being divided into smaller units so that in the end there will be no dark spots anywhere. This work is slow at best, but is being accomplished rapidly and with much consideration for conditions. However, the down town district is what is puzzling the city fathers just at present. The "stagger" system of lights reflect no shadows and the long run as not so many lights are needed. It is the most modern and up-to-date of all methods and its installation is watched with interest. Meanwhile the poles go down. When the last one is leveled the citizens should breathe a sigh of relief. Not only were they unsightly but they were a menace to the fire hazards in the down town district owing to their proximity to the buildings in case of fire breaking out in upper stories. All hail to the Commercial club that made this change a reality. All hail to the city council that formally enacted it into a law and the future generations will hardly realize how poles were ever permitted when they view the change in the landscape in the down town districts.

MAIL ORDER COMPETITION.

The parcel post has resulted, as was generally expected, in a large increase of the mail order business. Some merchants bewail this condition, and never cease to complain about the unfairness of the system that provides such easy facilities for this form of trade.

Other merchants, instead of complaining, initiate the mail order method with great success. They start a campaign for educating the people along the country roads about the advantages they get by buying in nearby centers. They show them how the near-home store simply has to keep only substantial and reliable goods, or it could never hold its trade.

Also they can often get their goods the day they order them, and if the stuff does not prove as represented, satisfaction is guaranteed. They do not have to go through with the vexatious process of trying to get satisfaction out of some vast impersonal machine of a great mail order house.

The bulk of the trade that goes to mail order houses would go to stores near home, if people knew what the home store had to sell. The local newspaper, but the catalog and solicitor for the home merchant, and the one means by which he can beat the big mail order concern.

DON'T GIVE UP THE SEA.

Some members of the United States Senate feel that in order to keep out of the European war the government should prohibit American citizens from traveling on private belligerent vessels. No party lines are drawn. Says the Wall Street Journal, May it be suggested also that it should not be a question of personal feeling of favor or hostility towards any of the contending powers, as far as the East is from the West, so far should this question be removed from racial or personal bias.

An issue has been raised of the greatest importance to all neutral countries and to neutrals in future wars. The United States does not raise the issue because the acts complained of were committed by one particular side in the war. It would be its duty to act just as quickly with any power on the other side, if occasion called. It is a principle, not a bias, that is at stake.

The sea is the world's common highway. Every man in this country whose business or pleasure calls him abroad has the right to travel on that highway, or ship his goods over it. He has the right to use the highway just as much as any citizen of New York has to travel to his office on Broadway. Think of the legislature attempting to stop the latter from using the street in his legitimate business pursuit for fear he might get mixed up in dogfight going on in the middle of the highway. The proper way would be to insist upon the preservation of the citizens' rights, and attempt to keep dog-fight out of the common highways of commerce.

Traveling upon belligerent ships is not the root of the matter. Senator Nelson showed that more vessels flying neutral flags than belligerent had gone to the bottom. The question involved is the right of neutral nations to engage in their business pursuits. The business world is interested in this, and none more so than the business world of the United States, no matter towards which side in the war their feelings may incline.

Law is for the safeguarding of property rights, the safety of law-abiding people, and the preservation of society within the sovereign state. The majesty of the law must be upheld without fear or favor. International law rises higher to dealings between sovereign powers. Rules of war, like the criminal law, do not make up the whole body of law. The non-belligerent should be protected. May the United States Senate have the wisdom to help uphold the law for the sake of all that the law represents.

THE PERNICIOUS TAX.

A scheme for robbing the North for the benefit of the South would be an excellent description of the Federal income tax under Democratic regime, and in the fact that it works that way is probably to be found the reason for the apparent determination of the Democratic majorities to make good some considerable portion of the deficit produced by the Underwood tax and general Democratic inefficiency by an increase of the income tax. The annual report of the Democratic Commissioner of Internal Revenue clearly shows where the tax is collected, while the most cursory examination of the appropriations of the Democratic Congress establishes with equal clearness that the lion's share of the Federal revenues is being expended in the Southern States. It is noteworthy that State, county and municipal taxes are almost invariably expended in the communities in which they are collected, thus returning in some form to benefit those who pay them. Not so the Federal taxes, which are collected in those States where the people show the greatest ability and business enterprise and, under a Democratic Administration, are expended in those States which pay the smallest proportions. Take the official figures for the individual income tax for the fiscal year ending June, 1914, and compare the $2,670,630 paid by Illinois with the $425,631 paid by Texas, the $1,240,501 paid by California with the $165,904 paid by Tennessee, the $2,683,084 paid by Massachusetts with the $197,559 paid by Virginia, the $264,315 paid by Iowa with the $119,933 paid by Georgia, the $128,785 paid by Nebraska with the $43,369 paid by South Carolina, the $1,439,401 paid by Ohio with the $121,368 paid by Florida, the $94,975 paid by Kansas with the $34,664 paid by Mississippi, and the $383,529 paid by Michigan with the $209,315 paid by Louisiana. The eleven Southern States which constitute "the solid South" pay a total individual income tax of $1,564,634, while eleven Northern States—exclusive of New York, which pays the largest tax of any State—pay a total individual income tax of $16,285,744. With the Southern Democrats in control of the White House and both Houses of Congress, and diverting the funds of the Federal expenditures to their section of the country is it any wonder that they regard an individual income tax as an ideal method of making good the Democratic deficit?

TEACHING IMMIGRANTS.

In the days when the alien newcomers from Europe mostly settled in a few large cities and regions close to the Atlantic coast, the problem of assimilating this body of foreigners was not widely felt.

Today there are comparatively few towns where the so-called native stock retains undisputed possession. When you get a ship load of Russians, Italians, and nearly all of the immigrants from which can not read in any tongue, what is going to happen at the ballot box, except in the few States having a literacy test?

Fortunately the movement to provide evening schools and classes for these new-comers has become very widespread. But, unfortunately, many of these schools and classes do not get at the problem in a practical manner.

A school teacher told the writer recently that in an evening school in another city where she taught, a class of ignorant and earth-bound Russians was given a reading book consisting mostly of selections from the poetic classics. They were the same books used by American children, the purpose of the selection being to give the native children a taste for good literature.

But what could a poor, snub-nosed, flat-faced, ambitious and aspiring, but slow-witted Russian do, when this poem was given for her to read?

"Where do you come from baby dear."

"Out of the everywhere, into the here."

Russians, Poles, Rumanians, Bulgarians, and the like do not need "First steps to literature." They should have the very simplest kind of problems, like making change in the stores, the names of kitchen utensils, prices of common articles of clothing, common words used in shops and on farms.

To see them struggling to grasp abstract conceptions, as beyond their powers as they would be beyond some dumb beast, is a pathetic aspect of school work that many politicians and educational task masters have failed to grasp.

The man who says a workman could support a family comfortably on $12 per week, never figured on the fact that a woman can't go down to buy a two-cent yeast cake without putting on a $12 hat.

What the physician who says it does no harm to bolt food probably means is that it does no harm to the doctors that make a specialty of treating the victims of the bolting habit.

It hasn't escaped notice that the new year has advanced as far in places where it wasn't welcomed with a floor of champagne as it has in some of the big cities.

Money itself doesn't make a fool of a man, but it sometimes affords him the means and opportunity of making a fool of himself.

The sardine packing business is reported to have been an almost complete failure in Norway, but in the cities on the street car lines it is being conducted as actively as ever.

This being a presidential year, the pivotal states are preparing to pivot as soon as the orchestra strikes up.

Lady Eglantine, the $100,000 hen, would be worth just $1.50 for a chicken stew.

On the Spur of the Moment

ROY K. MOULTON

The Editor's Reward.
The editor died and went to heaven. But stood outside the gate. Because he hadn't the nerve to knock. And thought that he would wait. Till some other mortals came along. He'd see what they would do. And if they entered the pearly gate. He thought he might slip through. He watched the vast procession pass. Up to a portal wide. While Peter told some they were up too high. And others he took inside. The editor weary of waiting so long. Finally got in. He figured No. 17. To see if Peter would accept him then. Or would "with thanks" decline. He heard the sweet voiced angels sing. His eyes filled to the brim. He shivered and shook in agony. Knowing his chances were slim. "Aha!" said Peter, "an editor here? (He laughed with pure delight. Why, certainly, you may come right in. For all you did was write.)"

Uncle Abner.
Deacon Stubbs missed the train the other day when he started to go down to the city. He figured No. 17 would be two hours and 55 minutes late as usual, but she was only two hours and 40 minutes late.

Whenever the public function is a failure there never seems to be any body in particular to blame, but when it is a success, everybody is responsible for it.

Charles Harkins says it is too darn bad that rheumatism has come in the winter time when there isn't any work to do around the farm anyhow.

Women used to go to a party to talk about their clothes, but now they go to the party to talk about their electric and make it embarrassing for those who haven't got one.

Troubled.
Dear Sir:—My wife has went back on me and I have got more trouble than I can bear. Whatever shall I do? Please give me a REPLY.
You talk about trouble. Why, pal, you don't know the meaning of the word. Supposing you had a boil on the back of your neck and your jaw swelled all out of place by a rebellious tooth; supposing three of your children were down with the mumps; and the fourth smoked cigarettes; supposing you had nice installment payments coming due within a week and you had overdrawn your salary $19.45; supposing your neighbor on the right kept a goat and the one on the left kept a phonograph and the one across the street was a vocal teacher; supposing you had dyspepsia, gout, jumping neuralgia, sciatic rheumatism, St. Vitus dance and shingles at the same time. Then you might begin to talk about trouble. You make us decidedly weary.

His Good Idea.
The serious-looking man was trying hard to listen to the speaker's eloquence but the squalling of an infant in the row of seats directly ahead gave him little opportunity. Annoyance gave way to irritation and irritation in turn was superseded by a resolve. He leaned forward, touched the mother on the shoulder, and in a dispassionate tone asked: "Has your baby been christened yet?"
"Why no, sir. Why do you ask?"
"Merely because I was about to suggest that if he had not been christened you might name him Good Idea."

The Daily Novelette

Prudent Prunella.
It isn't always safe to judge newspapers, cigars, and women by their wrappers. —Prudent Prunella.

On his way to the Boo and Buggy penwiper factory, Jacques Bugly stopped in at the ladies' tailoring establishment of Simon Weeve, his old friend and schoolmate.
"My wife will come in for a new suit today," he told Simon Weeve. "At last I've persuaded her that her 1905 burlap suit is no longer fit to be seen in public. You know how my wife is, Simon. Although we are rich today, she can't overcome the habits she contracted when we were poor and struggling. So I know she won't buy anything worth wearing today unless she thinks she's getting a great bargain. I want you to offer her a suit like that five hundred dollar one in the window for four dollars and fifty cents, and send me a bill for the balance."

Late that afternoon Prunella Bugly fluttered into her husband's office in a green cheesecloth suit worth at least $2.80.
"What do you think, Jacques!" she cried. "I worked a fine stroke of economy. I made you Weeve sell me a suit for four dollars that I wanted four-fifty for, and half an hour later when Mrs. Twidly saw it on me and learned the price, she offered me eleven dollars. So I went right away into Levy & Deery's and bought this for $1.89 and then went to Mrs. Twidly's house and changed! What would you do without me, dear?"
But her husband had slid into the waste paper basket.

A Sort of a Bull.
One day Pat and Mike got into an argument over the height of a mutual friend. For awhile the discussion was quite animated, and finally they began to produce money.

"O! tell yez that he is six feet high!" emphatically declared Mike, holding out his hand. "An', phat's more, here's 50 cents to prove it."

"G'wan, g'wan!" came back Pat in a loud voice. "O! tell yez fifty that he couldn't look over the top av that stone wall."

"Shure, an' that stone wall is more than six feet high," declared Mike, glancing at the structure, "but O! bet yez that he could go it with his hat on." —New York World.

FAVORS UNIFORM INHERITANCE TAX

Cordell Hull.

Representative Corbell Hull of Tennessee, author of the income tax law, will ask congress to pass a law making inheritance taxes uniform in all the states. "Great Britain and other European countries which levy inheritance taxes do not appear to have any great difficulty with them, and I believe a system of uniform laws in this country would prove popular," says Representative Hull.

Runciman and Henley.
It is related that shortly after Runciman, the well known writer on seafarers and smugglers and poachers, had bitterly fallen out with W. E. Henley he lay dying in London. To Henley in Edinburgh, lame and ill, came an indirect message that Runciman believed that if Henley would come and look on him he would get well. It was a dying man's whimsey, but Henley took the train from Edinburgh and arrived in London to find his friend dead.

Cooking Eggs.
"Eggs should never be cooked," says a culinary expert. "That sounds odd, but it is true. They should simply be congealed with slow heat. Every-where I hear complaints about souffles and omelets. They fall or they never rise. But all that trouble could be avoided if the cooks only understood the relation of heat to eggs. The temperature should always be below the boiling point when eggs come in contact with the water. Then the heat will gradually penetrate the egg. The result will be a creamy mass instead of a hard and tough lump. That is the main principle in regard to eggs, and if that is followed cooks will not be bawling about their fat omelets."

Her Ignorance.
"Sam," said May Irwin to her negro butler on one occasion, "do you mean to vote at the coming election?"
"Co'se I mean to vote," Sam answered promptly.
"Well, what do you know about the constitution?"
"Law, now, Miss May," said Sam. "You don't have to be a doctor to vote."

MAY EXTEND LIMIT FOR PAYING TAXES

City Commission Will Consider Extending Time for Paying Taxes at Their Next Meeting.

At the coming regular meeting of the council on Tuesday, the twenty-fifth, or possibly the coming Friday, the city commission will consider granting an extension of time for the payment of taxes without the penalty of the proposed resolution carries the time will be extended in which to make payments without having to forfeit the two percent for delinquency.

Last year an extension was granted and many cities and villages are allowing a month's extension this year. There may be some opposition to the extension on the grounds that it will only benefit the wealthy taxpayers who invariably hold off until the last moment, thereby obtaining the full interest earning power of the money. Whether the extra month will be allowed or not, the amount of taxes that will be collected up to that date.

A system brought out by Mayor James A. Fathens, was an acceptable solution to the problem of collecting taxes. It is proposed by the Mayor to allow a discount of payment of taxes to taxpayers for a month before an early date. This would furnish an incentive for early payments. It is further suggested that for a certain period a one percent discount be given. At the stipulated time the penalty for delinquent payments could be attached.

OBITUARY.

Jennie Grezhuska.
Solemn high mass was celebrated at nine o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Catholic church over the remains of Jennie Grezhuska, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Grezhuska, the Rev. W. A. Goebel officiating. The pallbearers were: James F. Hickey, Robert A. Koebler, Willard McDermott, Robert Koebler, and Willard Croak. Interment was made in Mt. Olivet cemetery.

Mrs. Mary Davis.
Mrs. Mary Davis, a former resident of this city, died at her residence at Lake Geneva, last Saturday night, after a period of five days' illness. She was seventy-three years old and born in the state of New York. In her early girlhood days she crossed the plains of the west before the existence of the railroad to California. At the age of seventeen she was united in marriage to Mr. Davis. After sixteen years of married life Mr. Davis was called by death.

Mrs. Davis is survived by three children, George F. of this city, Mr. Pearl Leipzig of Lake Geneva, at whose home she passed away, and Mrs. William Wythe of Genoa, Ill. The funeral services took place yesterday afternoon at Rockford and interment was made in the Rockford cemetery.

SHORTHAND IN OLDEN TIMES

No System of Phonetic Stenography Was Known to Ancients—Abbreviations Were Employed.

We are told, in a recent story, that not only the Romans, but the ancient Hebrews, possessed fine systems of stenography, and that public men took stenographers with them wherever they went. This is not true in any strict sense. The ancient Romans and Hebrews had systems of shorthand, but not of stenography. Their shorthand consisted of abbreviations, the use of letters for words, the introduction of arbitrary symbols and memory systems, and that kind of thing. No system of phonetic stenography, such as we have at the present day, in which a fluent character represents a certain sound, and in accordance with which the sounds of the human speech can be transcribed as they are uttered, was known to the ancients. The shorthand system invented by Ciro, the secretary of Cleopatra, is well known; it has no phonetic basis. Two amanuenses were necessary to keep up with a speaker, and there are even tales that Caesar kept six amanuenses going at once. It is certainly a long jump from that to the handy girl of today, whose swift pencil easily keeps up with a man's utterance.

Few people of the present day have any just or correct understanding of phonetics. The average person confuses the name of a letter of the alphabet with the sound which it is supposed to represent, fails to distinguish between diphthongs like long "i" and the simple vowel sounds, and in many ways betrays the fact that he is quite without the phonetic sense. The teaching of stenography has spread a knowledge of phonetics, and in the long run must produce a much more general realization of the ridiculousness and wastefulness of our present system of spelling the English language.—New York Mail.

Chaplains in the Navy.
There are in the United States navy four chaplains of the rank of captain, eleven of the rank of commander, one of the rank of lieutenant commander, two of the rank of lieutenant and six of the rank of lieutenant junior grade. Cute Little Girl.

One day while Katherine's mother was ill a cup of beef tea was prepared for her, but Katherine fancied it and drank almost all of it. Her father was about to scold her when her mother said:

"Never mind; it does me just as much good to see her drink it."

Shortly after this a dose of castor oil was prepared for Katherine, and she poured it into her doll's mouth.

"Why, Katherine," said her astonished mother, "what did you do that for?"

"That's all right," Katherine replied, "it will do me just as much good if she drinks it."—Boston Herald.

The Truce of God.

The "truce of God" was introduced by the clergy of Guienne around about the year 1080. It was adopted in Spain about 1050, in England about 1080.

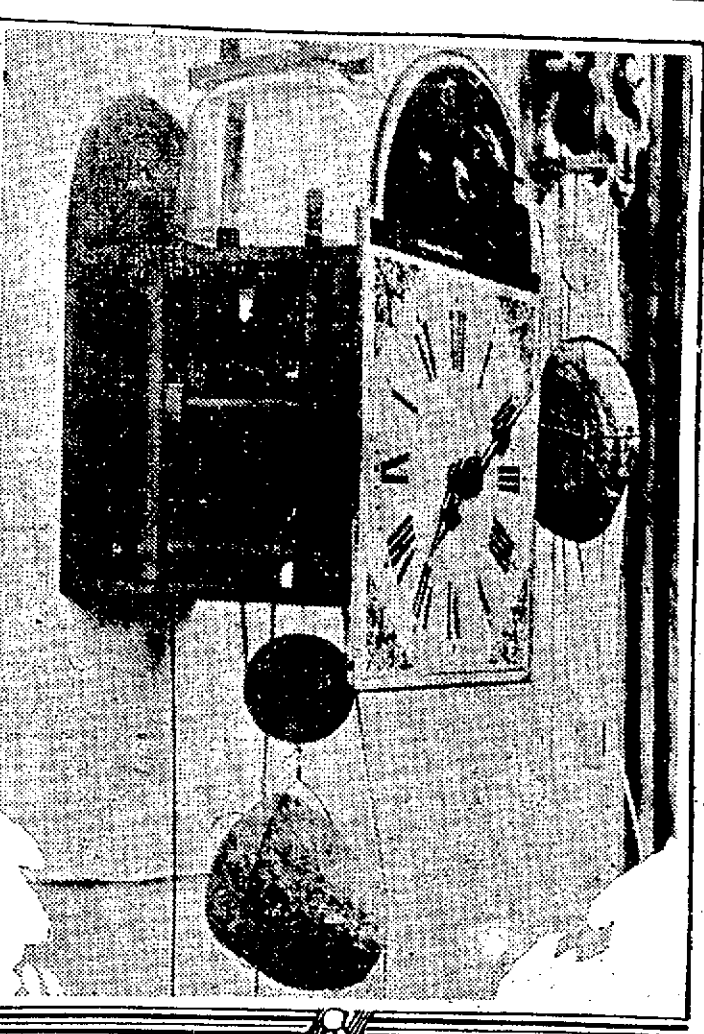

According to this famous treaty, a cessation of all violent quarrels was enjoined under heavy penalties during all church festivals and from every Wednesday evening until the following Monday morning. This left only about eighty days in the year available for shooting and stabbing one's neighbors.

The truce seems to have accomplished much good, notwithstanding the fact that it was very imperfectly observed.—New York American.

COPPER CLOCK WEIGHTS TURNED INTO GERMAN BULLETS, REPLACED BY STONES

German clock with stones as weights.

The shortage of copper throughout the German Empire is marked to such a degree that not only have the copper cooking utensils, the pride of the thrifty German hausfrau, been converted into food for rifle and gun, but even the ancient clocks with heavy pendulums of copper have been made to add to the war contributions, their place being taken by stones.

TWO ALARMS OF FIRE WITHIN FIVE MINUTES

Attempt to Thaw Out Frozen Pipe With Gasoline Torch Results in Small Fire.

Two fire alarms came within five minutes of each other last evening from seven-twenty and seven-twenty-five o'clock and the apparatus of the department was divided in answering the calls. The first came from the residence of Mrs. Wolf, 338 Locust street and the motor trucks responded.

The cause of the alarm was a small chimney fire, which had been so numerous of late. While at this fire, some of the fire vehicles were directed to the Conway residence on Washington street and Garland avenue. An attempt had been made to thaw out a frozen water pipe in the kitchen with a gasoline blow torch. The torch proved to be defective and gasoline leaked out on the floor and caught fire from the torch flames.

The fire was put out by members of the family before the department arrived. Only nominal damage was done and the firemen found the frozen water pipe refused to respond to either the gasoline torch or the fire from the burning floor.

LANGUAGE OF SEALING WAX

Meaning Has Been Given All Colors Generally Made, Says New York Stationery Dealer.

A well-known New York stationery dealer says that the language of sealing wax is a late fashionable fad. A meaning has been given to all the colors generally made, and all persons who use sealing wax on their letters should be acquainted with these meanings, so that the use of a favorite shade may not be misinterpreted.

In this new language white means a proposal of marriage, black is a message of death, of course, and violet signifies sympathy or condolence. Chocolate should be used for invitations to dinner, vermilion for business communications, while ruby—suggestive perhaps of a bleeding heart—is used to seal love letters. Green is used to signify hope, brown to tell of melancholy, blue of constancy and yellow of jealousy.

Pink is the proper color for school-girls to use in sending letters to one another, while matured ladies should use gray for letters of friendship.

Regeneration.

Starfish will grow new arms, lobsters new claws, and lizards new tails. A new lizard will not indeed spring from a new tail, or a new lobster will grow from a detached claw, but a new starfish will grow from a detached arm. In the vegetable kingdom, as a writer in Knowledge remarks, this phenomenon is still more common, and has been put by man to practical use. Although identical in principle, the growing of a plant from a cutting may not seem so astonishing as the growing of a new starfish; but growing not one but many plants from a leaf seems almost as extraordinary. It is not unusual to see a leaf of the bryophyllum that, after lying on moist ground for a little time, has half a dozen new plants growing from its edge. Among the many plants that can thus be propagated is the begonia; and every housewife knows a geranium plant can be grown from a leaf stalk.—Youth's Companion.

Peculiar Boring Clam.

One of the strangest creatures known to science is the pholas, or boring clam. When still very minute the animal bores into the sandstone ledges at extreme low water, by means of its sharp shell, which is replaced by secretions as it is worn away. It penetrates the rock to a depth of six or eight inches, and hollows out its burrow as it increases in size. Shaped roughly like a top, it could not leave its rock dwelling even if it wished to do so. For food, it depends on the animalcules that float in sea water, which it seizes by its long siphon, or tongue. The pholas is in great demand at the seaside resorts along the Pacific coast, for its meat is very tender and makes excellent soup.—Youth's Companion.

A Memorable Year.

Quite naturally anything that has to do with ourselves assumes first importance, but this trait is not often so plainly exhibited as in the case of the aged gentleman whose great-grandchild came running to him in a state of eager excitement. It seems that the boy had just learned the date of Washington's death, and was anxious to impart his information to others.

"Grandfather," he cried, "what great event occurred in 1799?"

"Let me see," said the old man, musingly. "Oh, yes, to be sure! I was born in that year."

New Life Given

Our body is likened to a machine. When the parts are all new and kept well oiled, it runs along smoothly. By and by the parts become worn and soon have to be replaced by new ones.

So likewise the parts of the human machine run well when it is healthy and well lubricated. But it too wears out or becomes diseased and the diseased parts have to be replaced by new tissue.

There may be many organs of different parts of the body diseased at the same time. The Milk and Rect Treatment can cure several ailments at the same time as easily as it can one, because proper and sufficient repair matter is furnished to all tissues needing it.

BUILD EXPORT TRADE TO BALK DEPRESSION

ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF COM-MERCE WARNS MANUFAC-TURER TO LOOK AHEAD.

TO FOLLOW WAR BOOM

Advices Greater Efficiency Than Ever Before Attempted in American Plants to Meet Foreign Competition.

(American business, overstimulated by war orders, is due for a shock when the war ends. The time to get braced for the shock is now. Thus says Edwin F. Sweet, assistant secretary of commerce, the man in immediate charge of the federal organization for studying and administering to the needs of business. Turn the munitions plants into export factories when peace comes, advises Mr. Sweet in the following article, written for this paper.—The Editor.)

By Edwin F. Sweet.
Washington, D. C., Jan. 19.—The munitions orders and the other increases in foreign trade have resulted in new machinery, new factories, and new additions to factory plants abandoned for many years have been fitted up as shops. We now have far greater manufacturing plant capacity than ever before.

There is no longer a home market enough to consume the capacity production of our plants. So, when the war ends we will have this alternative: either to dismantle the excess factories, scrap the machinery, throw the men out of work by the thousands, and create a tremendous economic loss, or to develop foreign markets and keep our plants running at capacity.

Efficiency Will Win Trade.
Whether we can hold our new foreign markets, and develop them still further, depends upon two things: the quality of our goods and their price. Of the quality there is no question. American goods are regarded as the best in every foreign market. It is a question, then, of price, and in that we are at a disadvantage.

We can meet European prices in the competitive markets of the world by developing factory efficiency. This is not a political argument, but it is a fact that the protective tariff system tends to diminish the efforts of manufacturers to attain efficiency in their plants. A great many manufacturers are conducting their business along antiquated lines. Our department has been helping the hosiery, pottery and other industries, and it is surprising how many plants we find having absolutely no cost-keeping system.

In Europe wages are low compared with what we pay. But we can offset this, instead of regarding the flood of gold pouring into the United States as easy money, our manufacturers ought to use these profits in the purchase of the latest and best machinery. Now is the time to get down to the strictest, bedrock principles of manufacturing.

The increased volume of production in almost all lines of manufacture ought to be a great help in attaining greater efficiency, because increased volume reduces unit cost.

Reaching Turning Point.
American business has reached a turning point. Men are now thinking in millions where a few years ago they thought in thousands. They are realizing for the first time the existence of foreign markets. They are beginning to make their first serious study of foreign trade. Foreign trade will be a dominant element in the new era which we are beginning.

I look to see our manufacturers take a different form. We will export less raw material, such as wheat and cotton, and more finished products, such as flour and cotton goods. We are beginning to import tin ore and smelt it ourselves. All these are indications of the new philosophy of business. Up to the present we have regarded foreign markets as dumping ground for over-production, for goods which the American public failed to buy. Now we are beginning to learn that foreign markets desire goods different from those sold at home. We will make this differentiation in the future, not only within factories, but I expect to see factories producing exclusively for export and manufacturing goods just as the foreign market specifies.

IS WAR RESPONSIBLE FOR GREATER NUMBER OF MALES IN ENGLAND?

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

London, Jan. 19.—Is war responsible for a greater and increasing proportion of boy babies? This question is engaging the attention of British medical authorities following the Registrar-General's report that all records for boy babies born in thirty-six large towns in England and Wales have been broken during the last nine months.

As against 1,000 female births, 1,082 boys were born in January and March, 1,042 in April and June, and 1,055 in July, August and September. Advance records indicate that the ratio will be even greater from October to January, 1916. A theory that some natural laws, yet undiscovered, lends to the birth of more boys than girls during a nation's war stress is partially borne out by reports from abroad that male births have exceeded female births during the war to an even greater extent than in England.

Professor W. D. Halliburton, Dean of Medicine at King's college, London, discussing the subject, declared today that there is no scientific theory to justify the belief.

"The fact is there," he stated, "we must look upon it as a wise dispensation of Providence. One popular explanation is that the anxiety or privation of the mother during the pre-natal period has some influence on determining her child's sex. But no scientific explanation warrants such an idea."

Professor Arthur Dendy, of the Zoological and Animal Biology department of King's College, declared that prevailing conditions could not be attributed to mere coincidence. He was unable to explain further.

Official records made public by the Registrar-General also said that the marriage rate for England and Wales during the last three months was the highest in history—21.3 persons per 1,000.

THIRTEEN THOUSAND MINISTERS AND PRIESTS SERVE IN FRENCH ARMY

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Paris, Jan. 19.—Nearly 13,000 ministers and priests are today serving in various capacities with the French army, according to statistics just given out by the Minister of War. The government itself has assigned as chaplains with regiments 161 Catholic priests, twenty-eight protestant ministers and fourteen rabbis. There is about an equal number of chaplains who have volunteered their services and been allowed to go with the troops. Most of the ecclesiastics are serving as nurses. Their total numbers 12,580.

GOOD OMENS FOLLOW BIRTH OF JAP HEIR

Birth of Prince Comes At Such A Time That All Japan Rejoices.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Tokio, Jan. 19.—The prince born on the night of December 2 in Empress Sadako, making the fourth son of Emperor Yoshihito, has been named Akihito-no-miya (Takahito). The event of the birth, on the day the nation great coronation military review which is held only once in the life-time of an emperor, has been interpreted by the Japanese people as an omen bespeaking the lasting perpetuity and prosperity of the imperial family. The announcement that both the Empress and the infant are doing well has also been welcome news to the people in view of the fact that rumors concerning the health of the Empress had recently been circulated widely.

The Japanese people for ages have believed in signs indicating the trend of the future and the glorious view which could be had of the sacred Mt. Fuji during the coronation review as well as the daylight vision of the crescent moon which was followed at dusk by the news of the birth of an imperial prince, created a most favorable impression among the elder people that the destiny of the imperial house and of the nation will be a glorious one. It was recalled that the Emperor's third son, Prince Nobuhito, Takamatsu-no-miya, was born on the day the supposedly invincible Russian fortress at Port Arthur capitulated to the Japanese army, January 3, 1905.

On the day of the birth of the new prince, while the Emperor was reviewing his troops on the grounds just opposite the Aoyama palace where the Empress was confined, she was able to see the fleet of aeroplanes and airships maneuvering over the parade ground, and accompanied by her court ladies, she was seen to wave flags in salutation to this newest-born of Japanese defense.

Fulfilling hereditary custom, the Emperor has presented a sword to the infant prince. This is a token of protection from all manner of evil things, and is a mark of value of the former widespread custom of presenting every Japanese boy baby with a sword representing the soul of the Japanese samurai or warrior. Another traditional presentation of a smaller sword to all baby girls, the weapon to be used for self-destruction in case the child were attacked beyond means of relief from family or friends.

Within a few days a religious ceremony will be held in the presence of the infant prince. Specially appointed scholars will read selected passages from the books of ancient sages, Confucius and others, and the court musicians will play sacred airs on harps and flutes to calm and purify the spirit of the child. The underlying idea is that the infant by hearing the sacred music is inspired to a sense of virtue and high morality.

Also believed that if the prince is not a man of virtue the sound of the strangled instrument will not be harmonious. The child being named, the birth and name will be formally reported to the spirit of Amaterasu Omikami, the Sun Goddess, who is a founder of the imperial Japanese house. Also a communication is made to the sanctuary of the imperial predecessors in the Tokyo palace. On the same day the infant prince was given a hot bath of water taken from the sacred well in the compound of the imperial palace.

On the 20th day after his birth the infant prince will be taken to the imperial palace for the first audience with the Emperor and Empress.

NEWS NOTES from MAJESTIC - BY DAISY DEAN -

Frank Daniels, for years one of the foremost comic opera comedians on the American stage, has signed a contract to appear exclusively in motion pictures. Arrangements have been made to make the best use of Mr. Daniels' talents as a funmaker, and to present him before the motion picture public in vehicles that are expected to win for him in motion pictures the reputation he now enjoys in comic opera.

A series of shorter comedies have been selected for the purpose of letting the public see Daniels more often and in a great variety of humorous situations. He will be under the direction of C. Jay Williams.

MUSTANG GIRL'S TACT.

AT THE APOLLO.

"The Mummy and the Humming Bird" Tonight.

Jaded motion picture appetites will find space that reawakens the enjoyment of every moviegoer in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird," the film adaptation of the play by Isaac Henderson, in which the famous Frohman star, Charles Cherry, at the Apollo tonight.

"The Mummy and the Humming Bird" recounts the tragedy of a neglected wife who seeks amusement in the company of a notorious Italian novelist whose only object in making love to her is the hope of eventually accomplishing her downfall. The play, a masterpiece of the unsuspicious husband, the revenge which a former victim of the wily schemer wreaks and the saving of the innocent woman are fraught with thrills and dramatic suspense in abundance.

It is the sort of production which cannot but impress those who view it with the importance of the alliance between Charles Frohman, the great theatrical producer, and the famous Players, the pioneer concern in the adaptation of celebrated plays to the screen, an alliance which made possible the introduction to the photographic public of so distinguished an artist as Charles Cherry and many others of equal renown.

AT THE PRINCESS.

Billy Sunday Tonight.
The famous evangelist and his party will be shown in action tonight at the Princess. Billy Sunday has never before been shown in motion pictures and this picture tonight should create considerable interest.

"Pages From Life."
In addition to a four act feature will be presented, "Pages From Life" tells the story of a sweet and gentle woman's struggle against the whims of fate. Fanny was made an orphan in her earliest childhood and soon drifted with the nots and jetsam upon the highways and byways of the world. Here was a clinging and affectionate nature and when she grew old enough to love she wasted the riches of her heart on a worthless scoundrel. He forced her into the haunts of the underworld, but though she suffered with the vile and wretched creatures she remained pure in heart. On day the police raided a den to which her husband had dragged her and she was arrested and cast into prison. At a very moment when her degradation seemed to be accomplished a ray of sunshine broke through the bars of her prison. The story from this on is graphically described in the picture.

AT THE MAJESTIC.

Dorothy Gish New Appearing in
"Bred in the Bone."

It is generally accepted as man's assumption that a woman must trade on her honor for any favor in life she receives. But "Bred in the Bone" pointedly proves that such a thing is an assumption and an assumption only. "Bred in the Bone" is a big play, one that presents an every day story in a most absorbing way—and it carries a moral that is bound to reach every one of the millions who are to see it on the screen.

As in all Mutual productions in which Miss Gish has been presented as the star, the very cream of motion picture players have been cast in her support. Thus it is that in "Bred in the Bone," Miss Gish is seen surrounded with one of the strongest casts of screen players ever presented together on a picture screen.

Among them are George F. Banner, Margie Wilson, Albert Lee, Richard Cummings, William Hickey, who rendered such a sterling performance in "The Wolf of Wall Street," a preceding Mutual masterpiece; Fessenden, an earlier Mutual masterpiece; W. E. Lawrence and Al. Felsen.

Scientists have proven, frequently by demonstration, that insanity is passed along from generation to generation. The same has been amply proven with various diseases, but that a father or mother's love for the footlights may be inherited by the daughter, while never actually proven as a fact, is brought home with tremendous force in "Bred in the Bone."

Presentation of this masterpiece promises to furnish a subject of thought not only for scientists, but for the layman as well.

"Bred in the Bone" will be shown at the Majestic, tonight only.

Ethel Barrymore.

Ethel Barrymore, who has long enjoyed a great reputation on the legitimate stage, has joined the movies at what is declared to be the highest price ever paid a film actor. A pictures corporation has agreed to pay her $40,000 for each picture in which she appears.

To mount the horse she climbed stirrup-high with the aid of a bench before her father's cabin door, then scrambled up on the saddle, bestrode it, and was off.

and shadows of emotion are faithfully portrayed by this capable actor, who possesses the rare gifts essential for an adequate presentation of the character in Service's powerful poem. "The Song of the Wage Slave" is the second of the popular plays and players Metro series of Service poems pictured, and Mr. Brees was never seen to better advantage. He is supported by a strong cast, and many of the pictures, made with the great outdoors for a background, are wonderful features in themselves.

"The Song of the Wage Slave" will be seen at the Majestic, Thursday and Friday.

PATIENCE.

Patience is a virtue which, if you have it not, you should strive to attain. Patience is really the capacity for and habit of enduring or suffering. It is shown by the serenity with which we submit to the annoyance caused us by others on the one hand and is displayed in a wider and deeper sense by the fortitude which one exhibits in the concerns of life, in good and bad fortune.

WOMAN'S PAGE

Marrying for Money

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Daddy, when the drummer comes to town let me see his samples of goods, will you, please?" I want something that I will not be ashamed of in the east. I suppose the girls at Smith are good dressers. Marion Townsend spilled her father's face.

"Why, you had a very fine suit this spring and your broad cloth suit trimmed with fur is as good as new. I had not expected to get you another suit this fall. Your expenses will be high this year. You had better be contented with your suits and have a new coat at a M. R."

Townsend's tone was persuasive. I have been to a great deal of expense building and furnishing, considering her father. "I intend to turn you everything you need, but be as easy as you can on the pocket book."

No answering smile appeared on my face. She was thinking of the dozens of elaborate costumes hanging in the young wife's closet. That her father had bought them she knew, for a poor school teacher could never compass such a treasure. So this interloper was to have everything she wanted while the daughter of the house went to college in a last year's suit and practiced economy. I had seen the elegant furnishings and lavish scale of her father's house by the bride did not exactly suggest poverty. Besides, this was the first time she could remember a request for clothes had been refused; just when it was the most anxious to have everything right.

"Can't we work it that way?" asked the father kindly.

does not have to enforce his decisions. The mother-judge does. Moreover, another thing which makes her position a difficult and delicate one is her great power. There is practically no appeal from her court, and we all know that absolute power is a great test of character.

All honor to the mother-judge, I say, and don't show that you do not appreciate the importance of woman's sphere by denying her the ability to cultivate the judicial cast of mind and the need to possess it.

Household Hints

RAREBITS.

Welsh Rabbit—Fill lower part of chafing dish with boiling water, cover it first with a plate, then with the cover. Fry two thin slices of bread light brown in one-half teaspoon butter; place on the hot plate and keep covered. Wipe out the blazer with soft paper and put in four ounces fine-cut cheese, one-half teaspoon butter, two teaspoons cream (water may be used), one-eighth teaspoon English mustard; stir until it forms a creamy mass. Pour over the fried bread and serve at once. The bread may be toasted, of course, instead of fried.

Welsh Rabbit—One pound creamery cheese, one and one-half cups milk, two eggs, one tablespoon butter, two teaspoons cornstarch, one-half teaspoon table salt, one-half teaspoon mustard, one-half teaspoon white pepper, one-half teaspoon cayenne pepper, two teaspoons Worcestershire sauce. Put cheese, butter and milk into boiler of chafing dish while it is melting, being careful mixture does not boil as salt, pepper, mustard, and moisten with little milk. When cheese is entirely melted, stir in cornstarch mixture, add Worcestershire and finally stir in the beaten eggs. Stir entirely blended.

White Rarebit—One pint milk, one-fourth pound grated cheese, one egg, four tablespoons egg, salt; add four and seasoning, then beaten eggs. Serve on toast, hard-boiled eggs or croquettes.

GINGER CAKE AND COOKIES.

Soft Cocomnut Gingerbread—Cream together one cup sugar and half cup shortening, add two well-beaten eggs, one cup molasses, three cups flour, one cup sour milk (stir in half of the milk; in the other half add one and one-half teaspoons baking soda, one and one-half teaspoons baking soda, one teaspoon of powdered nutmeg and a few drops of lemon essence. Mix well, turn into well-greased and floured shallow pan; bake one hour.

Ginger Cake—Two cups brown sugar, one-half cup butter, three eggs, one cup molasses, one cup sour milk, one teaspoon baking soda, one-half teaspoon nutmeg, one-half teaspoon cinnamon, two cups flour.

Ginger Cookies—Mix together one pint molasses, three tablespoons lard, two well-beaten eggs, one scant tablespoon ginger, one-fourth pint warm water. Mix dough stiff enough to roll nicely.

LETTUCE DISHES.

Something green is appreciated at this time of year. Lettuce is cheap and has great possibilities. Lettuce Greens has the superiority in the "greens" family. Wash a pound of lettuce and the leaves and salted water, twenty minutes. Drain, cut fine and serve with lemon and hard-boiled egg.

Lettuce Salad with French dressing is always good. Use the outside leaves and stalks in vegetable soup or to make cream of lettuce soup.

Lettuce Soup—One-half pound lettuce, one pint chopped celery (leaves and roots), one pint tender. Rub through sieve, add one pint water, bring to a boil. Rub one tablespoon butter and two of flour smooth and taste. Sprinkle with salt and pepper or croquettes.

POPCORN GOODIES.

Popcorn Cakes—But lately popped corn through a clean coffee or tea grinder, then stir it into molasses and candy, using as much as will make the stuff very stiff. Spread on a greased slab and roll in inch thick with a buttered rolling pin. Cut into cakes and let become cold. The buttered cup only wants to be boiled until it forms a stiff ball in cold water. Easy to make and good.

TO RESTORE FADED SWITCH.

Steep a handful of tea (green for medium brown, black for deeper shade) and, when nearly cool, pour in a piece of copperas the size of a pea. Dip switch in this and dry. If not dark enough repeat until you get the shade wanted.

LET IN FRESH AIR DESPITE THE COLD

Health Bulletin Warns Against Making Hothouses of Homes.—Impure Air Means Disease.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Jan. 19.—A warning against making a hothouse of the home on cold winter days, and ignoring all principles of ventilation, is sounded by the health board today. There is a tendency to neglect the important subject of ventilation. Windows and doors are often kept tightly closed, and hot fires soon exhaust the oxygen in the air, which as a result becomes foul and impure. Infection, if introduced in such a home, is likely to remain. It is often observed that as soon as it is necessary to close the windows and start fires, sore throats and colds become prevalent.

"Let in the fresh air, no matter how cold the day," says this health message. "Do this at safe intervals. Lower the windows at the top to let the hot air in the upper part of the room to escape and raise it at the bottom to let the fresh air in. Do one room at a time, that the members of the family may not be exposed to drafts. Ventilation is just as necessary as food by day. Because your sleeping room may be cold with the windows closed, do not make the mistake of thinking that the air therein is fresh. It can never be fresh unless the window is open. Accustom yourself and your children to sleeping in rooms with open windows; it makes for better health for all."

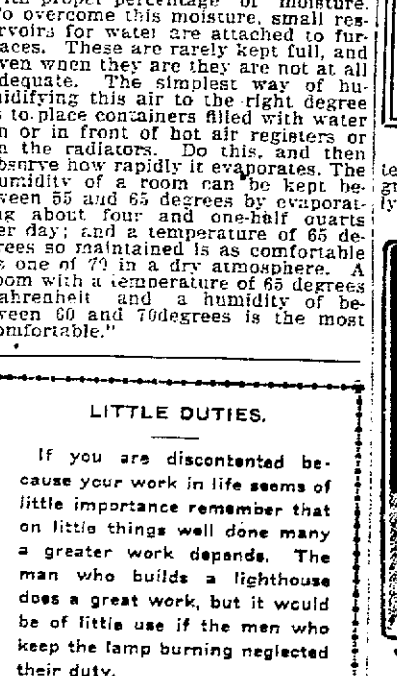

"The normal out-door air contains from 65 to 75 per cent of moisture. By the time this passes through a hot air furnace and reaches the living or sleeping room it will not contain more than 40 or 50 per cent of moisture. The same is true of houses heated by hot water where no provision is made for supplying moisture. The result is that the dried out air craves moisture and will take it from all surrounding bodies—from the skin, the mucous membrane of the mouth, the nose and throat; and is partly responsible for the dry, hacking laryngeal cough so prevalent in winter."

"From an economic standpoint, also, this method of heating without moisture is extravagant, for very dry air requires a higher temperature to produce the same sensation of warmth and comfort than does an atmosphere with proper percentage of moisture. To overcome this moisture, small reservoirs for water are attached to furnaces. These are rarely kept full, and even when they are they are not at all adequate. The simplest way of humidifying the air is to the right degree is to place containers filled with water on or in front of hot air registers or on the radiators. Do this, and then breathe how rapidly it evaporates. The humidity of a room can be kept between 55 and 65 degrees by evaporating about four and one-half quarts per day; and a temperature of 65 degrees so maintained is as comfortable as a higher temperature. A room with a temperature of 65 degrees Fahrenheit and a humidity of between 60 and 70 degrees is the most comfortable."

LITTLE DUTIES.

If you are discontented because your work in life seems of little importance remember that on little things well done many a greater work depends. The man who builds a lighthouse is of little use if the men who keep the lamp burning neglected their duty.

The Private Coffee of the greatest coffee merchants

Many years ago, the members of the Arbuckle firm wanted an especially fine coffee for their personal use.

Also to send out as gifts.

Their one idea was to secure the most delicious coffee that could be obtained, regardless of cost.

Before them, they had all the coffees of the world.

With years of study and experience in coffee to guide them, Yuban was chosen.

Its distinct individuality, its liquor, its aroma, its flavor, made it stand out from all other coffees.

Asked to purchase it

For years, members of the firm served Yuban only in their own homes, to their own guests.

Then it was sent out at Christmas as a gift coffee to friends and business associates.

Wherever it was sent, it was so enjoyed for its flavor and fragrance that everyone wanted it regularly—asked to be allowed to purchase it.

Instances of this kind became so frequent, it is confined to private distribution no longer, but is now offered the public.

Now supplied through grocers

2500 of the better class of Chicago grocery stores are authorized distributors of it.

The moment it was offered to these grocers they realized what it would mean to their customers to be able to obtain it.

Yuban is packed only in all-tin containers, sealed across the top with the Arbuckle signature. It is packaged in either whole bean, pulverized or a "clean-ground, chaff removed" form. If your grocer hasn't secured it yet, telephone Central 987, and we will give you the names of grocers in your own neighborhood who have. Arbuckle Brothers, Chicago. The largest coffee merchants in the world.

Heart and Home Problems

By Mrs. Elizabeth Thompson

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) Please tell me of a remedy to make my hair grow. It is very dry and breaks easily. Can you tell me of a hair-growing remedy that does not make the hair oily while using it?

(2) In introducing several young folk would it be all right to say it this way: "Miss Miller-Mr. Horn?"

(3) Please tell me something else one can say when being introduced besides "How do you do?" and "Pleased to meet you."

(4) Only brushing and the application of some mixture that contains oil will make the hair soft and smooth.

Oils, besides neutralizing the condition of dryness and making the hair easier to handle, has the added virtue of tonic properties, and if it is massaged into the scalp the benefit after some weeks is pronounced.

A tonic of this kind is made from sixteen ounces of pure cologne and two ounces of castor oil. Far from being greasy or unpleasant, this mixture, if rubbed on, and has an agreeable odor.

The best way of applying is to make many parts close together on each, using either the finger tips or a small brush. If the hair is extremely dry, the application may be used every day, but in many cases every other day is sufficient. Too much tonic will make the hair heavy with grease and altogether unmanageable.

The above treatment will promote the growth of the hair.

(2) Repeat the name of the person you are meeting and bow the head slightly.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1) I am almost seventeen and a junior in high school. I am having a party and have asked the nicest boys and girls I know. I have so many friends I know there will be very angry. Should I write them? If not, what should I do? I have already asked sixteen couples.

(2) About a year ago I was foolish enough to lend a boy my ring and he told me he lost it. This boy seemed like me very well and hated to tell me I had lost it. I was with him about two months ago. He seemed like such a sensible young man. Mother has asked about my ring. I was told the young man still has it. Should I ask him for it or should I write his mother? She is so nice.

(3) I am sending you a kodak picture of myself. Do you think I am pretty? I am rather jolly and take well with the boys wherever I go.

PEONY.

(1) In giving a party one has to expect to hurt the feelings of many people. Don't write to your invited friends. Just be friendly to them and in time they will forget about the party.

(2) Tell your mother. Perhaps she let a boy take a ring sometime herself and will understand. It would be well to speak to the boy about it, too. Now that you are not,

Dear Mrs. Thompson: There is a certain boy who has asked me to go places with him and I have always told him that I would see him later, because I did not have the ambition to tell him no.

Please advise me what to tell him next time, as I am fifteen and not allowed to go with all boys. P. L.

Tell him your mother doesn't want you to go. It will not take as much courage as you think.

Baking Helps

Learn to Regulate the Heat of Your Oven

By Mrs. Janet McKenzie Hill, Editor of the Boston Cooking School Magazine

There is just one way to make your cakes rise high and keep an even surface. Have your oven moderate at first, until the cake is half-baked; then increase the heat, so as to brown it over quickly. Extreme heat stiffens the dough. If you stiffen the outside of the cake before the rising is complete, you stop the rising process. Then the rising gas, forming inside, will bulge up the center, where the dough is still soft, and spoil the shape of the cake.

When the cake is out of the oven, the sides are cut into strips for the oven, take in a warm oven. This is because the cut surfaces of the cake do not seal over, but rather leave the pores open, allowing the leaving gas to escape and the heat to pass out readily. Small ovens cool rapidly, therefore they should be made smaller, degrees hotter than a larger oven. Do not attempt to bake bread and pastry together. Bread requires prolonged, moderate baking; pastry, the reverse.

Have a strong underheat for baking pastries, especially pastry.

There are only a few of the many baking helps found in the K. C. Cook's Book—a copy of which may be secured by sending the colored certificate taken from a recent can of K. C. Baking Powder to the JAMES MFG. CO., Chicago.

The Ford peace expedition, now at The Hague, has elected the following American members of the permanent peace board to sit in Europe indefinitely with the purpose of using all efforts to settle the war: William J. Bryan, Henry Ford, Miss Jane Addams, Rev. Charles F. Aked and Mrs. Joseph Pels of Philadelphia. The board will be composed of an equal number of members from neutral countries, and will remain in The Hague or Stockholm, with the financial backing of Mr. Ford. Each member will receive a salary, and the entire expenses of the board probably will amount to $500,000 yearly.

WAR HAS STIMULATED COMMERCE IN KOREA TO A GREAT EXTENT

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Seoul, Korea, Jan. 19.—The European war has so far favorably affected the industry and commerce of Korea, according to M. Komatsu, commissioner of foreign affairs for the government general. It is true, Mr. Komatsu pointed out, that the foreign trade in graphite, soda, beans, cotton and some other articles was disadvantageously influenced at the outset of the war, but this tendency has changed much for the better. The export in cereals, ox hides, live cattle and other articles has had an active demand especially from Russia which has also placed large orders for boots and ammunition pouches with Korean companies.

The total figures for export during the year ending July, 1915, stands about $2 million yen or $31,000,000. This shows an increase of five and one-half million yen as compared with figures for the preceding and corresponding period. As for imports, prices in wheat, flour, matches, drugs and medicines and a few other articles rose somewhat at the beginning of the war but fell afterwards to the usual standard. Some fluctuation in the prices have since been experienced, but it appears that this cannot be charged necessarily to the war. The total figures for imports during the twelve months above mentioned were about 65 million yen, which shows a decrease of 10 million from the preceding year. This means that the excess of imports over exports has decreased by about 19 million yen during the period as against the preceding year.

Mr. Komatsu said that difficulty was experienced in manufacturing to some extent, owing to the scarcity of chemicals, but that the scarcity has been overcome at present. Among things tobacco has found a new market in China and there is a good prospect in store for tobacco manufacture in Korea. He emphasized that transportation by sea has been affected by the war only to a very slight degree and that even new lines of regular service have been opened between different ports of Korea and Vladivostok in the Shantung province and other places.

There is one thing, however, which is causing a great deal of inconvenience to the extensive mining industry in Korea and that is the scarcity of dynamite. This is interfering seriously with the engineering and mining work. Before the outbreak of the war the greater part of the explosive used in Korea was imported from Glasgow, but the quantity imported has steadily decreased until at the end of last month it ceased altogether. In Japan proper dynamite is manufactured by military authorities, but on account of large orders for Russia, it is next to impossible to buy the explosive either from the government factories or private companies.

ECONOMIC SITUATION IN JAPAN IMPROVED, SAYS FINANCE MINISTER

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Tokio, Jan. 19.—Although the depression caused in Japan by the war has not been removed as yet, the economic situation here has greatly improved, according to T. Taketomi, the minister of finance, who submitted his budget for 1916 to the Diet yesterday. In view of possible decrease in revenue the government had inaugurated a policy of retrenchment since the beginning of the war. Nobody knew when the war would end, the minister said, and when normal financial conditions were restored Japan would start new enterprises. Activity in various lines of industry had been restored already, indicating that the effects of the war were beginning to pass. The minister estimated the total receipts for the year at 553,504,264 yen or about $767,522,122. This would be a decrease of 154,887,281 yen or $77,438,045 compared with 1915. The expenditures would show a decrease of 133,561,346 yen or $21,780,673.

As the result of the increase of exports, chiefly war supplies but with the movement of ships to the United States an important item, the Japanese specie reserve increased up to the end of November to 505,000,000 yen. Compared with the amount of last year, 326,000,000 yen, there has been an increase of about 179,000,000 yen. The minister said: "Such an example had never been shown before of the specie reserve having been increased without resorting to loans. The government is planning to increase the specie reserve all the more and to decrease our debts abroad. Owing to this increase of specie reserve there has been a tendency towards inflation of the market and a fall of interest, resulting in the rise of bonds and other negotiable instruments. All these things are a result of the war, mainly. While short term capital is plentiful and of low interest long term capital is lacking. This shows how careful the financial circles are."

Mr. Taketomi concluded: "It is important not to act carelessly in the financial matters. We shall plan to seek development of economic conditions calmly and in a practical manner in order to prepare ourselves for the time when peace shall have been restored."

CLEVELAND OFFICIALS - IN TO PASS TEST USED IN THE GRADE SCHOOLS

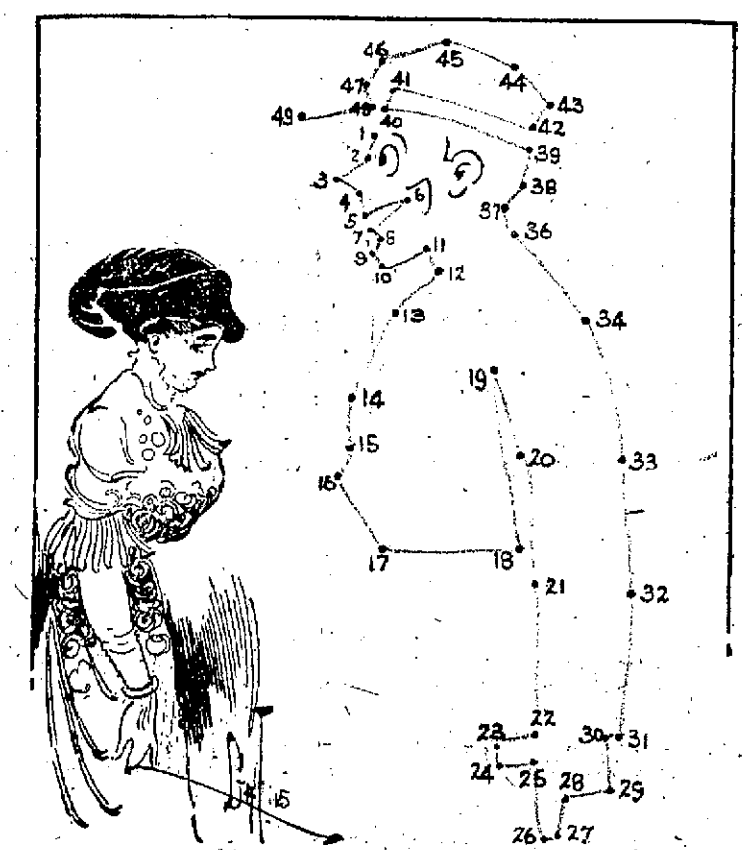

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE)

Cleveland, O., Jan. 19.—Although most of the city officials and six of seven school board members failed to pass the Binet normal mentality test, now officially used on all Cleveland school children, a majority of the insane patients at Newburg state hospital passed the test easily. Clevelanders opposed to the Binet test cited these facts today in their fight to have the test abolished. The test is a part of a system of examination under which 1647 school children have been declared mentally defective. A child of twelve, to be normal according to the Binet test, must, after hearing it once, repeat: "I saw in the street a pretty little dog. He had curly brown hair, short legs and a long tail."

A Queer Sentence.
A monkey exhibited at a museum established at Tacubaya, Mexico, was condemned to be shot under judicial sentence. It seems that the animal bit a man, who died from the results of the bite. The family of the deceased brought complaint before a judge, who was foolish enough to institute criminal proceedings against the monkey and sentenced him to be shot. Luckily the manager of the museum brought influence to bear and succeeded in obtaining a change of the sentence to perpetual imprisonment. The monkey is now enduring the punishment of his crime behind the bars of an iron cage at the museum.

Gold Heated Water.
Over 4,000 years ago an elaborate system of filtration was established by the Egyptians to purify the waters of the Nile. In both Rome and Athens hot water was drunk in preference to cold by the small minority who used water for drinking purposes. Chamber, writing in 1860, notes that the habit of drinking hot water was spreading among all classes in France. "Some warm it by holding it over the fire. Others dip burning bread into it. Rich people plunge a bar of hot gold into their water before drinking it, and the less wealthy a bar of hot iron, while the very poor are content to warm their drink with a live coal."

While The Passenger Was Arguing With The Ticket Agent About The Time of Leaving, The Train Left.

Fortunes have been lost by delaying the moment of action. Procrastination has robbed all of us of many things we might have had and enjoyed if we had but acted.

There are a lot of folks in this town who have heard of our remarkable ALMANAC AND ENCYCLOPEDIA and expect to own a copy. But they think that any time will do—that we will always have a copy for them.

But will we? Already the pile is getting low. We have telegraphed to the publishers for an additional supply only to be advised that the number printed for 1916 have all been disposed of.

Another case of "standing room only," as the theatres put it. SOMEONE IS GOING TO BE DISHED OUT OF THE COPY THEY EXPECTED TO GET. And that someone is going to be he who waits just a little too long.

On the same principle of a starting train or boat, the one who delays until the bell strikes generally get left.

"Early Bird" is always getting the juicy things because he is ahead of the other fellow.

—And, this is but another instance where Early Bird wins out by getting the most accurate—most authentic—ALMANAC AND ENCYCLOPEDIA of the year.

For scope of subjects—for reliable information upon every topic, subject or matters of information there has never before been offered a book the equal of this one.

Every one who has a copy is amazed at the wide range it covers. They marvel that such a wealth of knowledge could ever be gathered together and yet so condensed as to contain the full gist of the subject—not the slightest sacrifice made nor words used that would in any way cloud the information.

Already is the ALMANAC AND ENCYCLOPEDIA settling arguments. Already is it imparting information to its owners upon questions—features—places—cities—events—historical spots they have heard of but never known the real "inside facts" about before.

HOW TO CLEAR AWAY PIMPLES

Bathe your face for several minutes with resitol soap and hot water, then apply a little resitol ointment very gently. Let this stay on ten minutes, and wash off with resitol soap and more hot water, finishing with a dash of cold water to close the pores. Do this once or twice a day, and you will be astonished to find how quickly the healing resitol medication soothes and cleanses the pores, removes pimples and blackheads, and leaves the complexion clear and velvety.

Resitol ointment and resitol soap stop itching instantly and speedily heal skin humors, sores, burns, wounds and chafing. Sold by all druggists.

SOAP FOR BABY'S TENDER SKIN

The regular use of resitol soap is usually enough to prevent those distressing rashes and chafings to which most babies are subject. This is so, first, because resitol soap is absolutely pure and free from harsh alkali, and second, because it contains the resitol medication, on which so many physicians rely for skin troubles.

The Lone Wolf

By LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

(Copyright, by Louis Joseph Vance.)

But to give himself into the hands, to become an associate of one who could be party to so cowardly a crime as this—Lanyard told himself he would sooner pay the guillotine the penalty.

Consulting his watch, he found the hour to be no later than half past four, so swiftly—truly treading upon one another's heels—events had moved since the adventure of the somnambulist.

This left at his disposition a fair two hours more of darkness—November nights are long and black in Paris; it would hardly be even moderately light before seven o'clock. But that was a respite none too long for Lanyard's necessity; he must think swiftly in contemplation of instant action were he to extricate himself without the Pack's knowledge and consent.

Granted, then, that he must fly this stricken field of Paris. But how? De Morbihan had promised that Popinot's creatures would guard every outlet; and Lanyard didn't doubt him. An attempt to escape the city by any normal channel would be to invite one of two things—denunciation to the police on the charge of murder or one of those fatally expeditious forms of assassination of which the Apaches are past masters.

He must and would find another way; but his decision was frightfully hampered by lack of ready money, the few odd francs in his pocket were no store for the war chest demanded by this emergency.

True, he had the Ombre jewels; but they were not negotiable—not, at least, in Paris.

And the Huysman plans?

He pondered briefly the possibilities of the Huysman plans.

In his fretting, pacing softly to and fro, at each turn he passed his dressing table, and, chancing once to observe himself in the mirror, he stopped short, thunderstruck by something he thought to detect in that counterfeit presentment of his countenance, heavy with fatigue as it was, and haggard with contemplation of this appalling contrivance.

And instantly he was back beside the American, studying narrowly the contours of that livid mask. Here, then, was that resemblance that had baffled him; and now that he saw it he could not deny that it was unfathomably close—feature for feature the face of the murderer reproduced his face; coarsened, perhaps, but recognizably a replica of that Michael Lanyard who confronted him every morning in his shaving glass, almost the only difference residing in the scrubby black mustache that shadowed the American's upper lip.

After all, nothing wonderful in this; Lanyard's type was not uncommon; he would never have thought himself a distinguished figure.

Before rising he turned out the pockets of this casual double. But this profited him little—quite evidently the assassin had dressed for action with forethought to evade recognition in event of accident. Lanyard collected only a cheap American watch in a "rolled-gold" case, of a sort manufactured by wholesale, a common key that might fit any hotel door, a broken paper of Regie cigarettes, an automatic pistol, a few francs in silver—nothing whatever that would serve as a mark of identification; for, though the gray lounge suit was tailor made, the tailor's labels had been ripped out of its pockets, while the man's linen and underwear alike lacked even a laundry's hieroglyphic.

With this harvest of nothing for his pains Lanyard turned again to the washstand and his shaving kit, mixed a stiff lather, stropped another razor to the finest edge he could manage, fetched a pair of keen scissors from his dressing case, and went back to the murderer.

He worked rapidly, at a high pitch of excitement—as much through sheer desperation as through any appeal inherent in his scheme, either to his common sense or to his romantic bent. In two minutes he had stripped the mustache clean away from that stupid, flaccid mask.

Unquestionably the resemblance was now most striking; the American would readily pass for Michael Lanyard.

This much accomplished, he pursued his preparations in feverish haste. In spite of this, he overlooked no detail. In less than twenty minutes he had exchanged clothing with the American down to shirts, collars and neckties; had packed in his own pockets the several articles taken from the other, together with the jointed jimmy and a few of his personal effects, and was ready to bid adieu to himself, to that Michael Lanyard whom Paris knew.

The insistent masquerade on the floor had called himself "Goodenough Smith"; he must serve now as "Goodenough Lanyard," at least for the Lone Wolf's purposes; the police, at all events, would accept him as such. And if the memory of Michael Lanyard must needs wear the stigma of brutal murder, he need not repine in his oblivion, since through this perfunctory change the Lone Wolf would gain freedom even greater than before.

The Pack had contrived only to eliminate Michael Lanyard, the amateur of fine paintings; remained the Lone Wolf with not one faculty impaired, but rather with a headier purpose to shape his occult course.

Under the influence of his methodical preparations his emotions had cooled appreciably, taking a cast of cold, malignant vengeance.

He, who never in all his criminal record had so much as pulled trigger in self-defense, was ready now to shoot to kill with the most cold-blooded intent—given one of three targets; while for Popinot's creatures, if they worried him, he meant to exterminate them with as little compunction as though they were the rats in fact that they were in spirit.

Extinguishing the lights, he stepped quickly to a window and from one edge of its shade looked down into the street.

He was in time to see a stunted human silhouette detach itself from the shadow of a doorway on the opposite walk, move to the curb and wave an arm—evidently signaling another sentinel on a further corner and out of Lanyard's range of vision.

Herein was additional proof, if any lacked, that De Morbihan had not exaggerated the disposition of Popinot. This animal in the street, momentarily revealed by the corner light as he darted across to take position by the door, this animal with sickly face and pointed chin, with dirty muffer round its chicken-neck, shoddy coat clothing its sloping shoulders, baggy corduroy trousers flapping round its bony shanks—this was Popinot's, and but one of a thousand differing in no essential save degree of viciousness.

It wasn't possible to guess how thoroughly Popinot had picketed the house, in co-operation with Roddy's murderer, by way of provision against mischance; but the adventurer was satisfied that, in his proper guise as himself, he needed only to open that postern door at the street end of the passage to feel a knife slip in between his ribs—most probably in his back, beneath the shoulderblade.

He nodded grimly, moved back from the window, and used the flash-lamp to light him to the door.

CHAPTER XII.

Flight.

Now when Lanyard had locked the door the gruesome peace of those two bedchambers was insured, barring the unforeseen, for as long as the drug held sway over the faculties of the American, and Lanyard felt justified in reckoning that the other's unconsciousness would be tolerably protracted, while not before noon at the earliest would any Parisian landlord who knew his business dare permit the rest of an Anglo-Saxon guest to be disturbed in the absence, at least, of definite instructions to the contrary.

For a full minute after withdrawing the key the adventurer stood at alert attention; but the heavy silence of that sinister old rookery sang in his ears untroubled by any untoward sound.

That wistful shadow of his memories, that cowering Marcel of yesterday, in acute terror of the heavy hand of Mme. Troyon, had never stolen down that corridor more quietly; yet Lanyard had taken not five paces from his door when that other, at the far end of the corridor, opened, and Lucia Bannan stepped out.

cap, he had no choice but to accept it without protest.

"Come, then," he told her—"and not a sound."

She signified assent with another nod, and promptly he turned to an adjacent door, opened it gently, whipped out his flash-lamp, and passed through. Without sign of hesitancy she followed, and like two shadows they dogged that dancing spotlight through a linen closet and service room, down a shallow well threaded by a spiral of iron steps and, by way of a long corridor that linked the kitchen offices, on to a stout door of oak secured only by huge, old-style bolts of iron.

In two minutes from the moment of their encounter they stood outside Troyon's, that door at their back, facing a cramped, maddening alleyway—a dark and noisome souvenir of that wild medieval Paris whose effacement is an enduring monument to the fame of the good Baron Haussmann.

Now, again, it was raining, a thick drizzle that settled slowly, wanting little of a fog's opacity; and the faint glimmer of the street lamps of that ill-lighted quarter lent Lanyard and the girl little aid as they picked their way cautiously, and always in complete silence, over the slimy cobbles of the foul backway. For the adventurer had pocketed his lamp, fearing lest it bring down upon them some prowling creature of Popinot's, though he felt passably sure that the alley had been left unguarded—less, perhaps, through ignorance of it than through confidence that he would never dream of its existence did he survive to seek an escape.

For all its might and its omniscience, Lanyard doubted if the Pack had as yet identified Michael Lanyard with that ill-starred Marcel who once had been as intimate with this secret way as any skulking Tom of its feline hordes.

But with this one confidence was never akin to foolhardiness; and if, before leaving Troyon's back door, he had paused to take the girl's hand and had drawn it through his arm—it was his left arm that he thus dedicated to gallantry—his right hand remained unhampered and was never far from the grip of his automatic.

spirit of one committed to a forlorn hope:

She gave him pause with a small gesture. "But how?" she breathed in the least of whispers. "The concierge—"

"Leave that to me—I know another way. I need only a chance—"

"Then you must take me with you!" "Eh?" he stammered, dashed.

Her hands moved toward him in a flutter of entreaty: "I, too, must leave unseen—I must! Take me with you—and I promise you no one shall ever know—"

He lacked time to weigh the disadvantages inherent in her proposition; though she offered him a heavy hand-

Dinner Stories

Two exceedingly homely men were arguing about which was the uglier, when they met a Chinaman. They agreed to let him be the judge between them. They laid their case before the Chinaman in simple English, then they posed and waited. The Chinaman took a long time to come to a decision. He considered the two men from every angle. Finally he gave his verdict in calm tones: "Both are worse," he said.

PAIN IN BACK, MISERABLE ALL OVER.

Dear Mr. Editor:—

All last winter I suffered from a terrible pain in my back. I felt miserable all over, and could not walk but a short distance. Was unable to work and did not sleep well at night as I was obliged to arise frequently. I learned of Dr. Pierce's Anuric, that cures such troubles, and sent to him for a trial package. This relieved me of getting up at night in a short time, and I have gained considerable. I am better now than I have been for some time; sleep better, have less rheumatism and do quite a lot of work for a woman of my age. I had brick-dust settlements in my water before using "Anuric," now there is none.

Kindly print this letter, it may help some one else who suffers as I did, or worse.

"Why don't you hurl a brick at him?" asked the first speaker.

"That's what makes me mad," was the reply. "I can't get on top of my greenhouse to defy me."

"My dear," said Mr. Hemmardshaw, "I hope you are not planning to buy a lot of new furniture."

"I am not," replied Mrs. Hemmardshaw, "and I don't know what gives you the idea."

"This shopping list gives me the idea."

"What shopping list?"

"On this paper which I just picked up off the floor is written 'wash-

THOUSANDS of people, younger and older, are reading, or will read, this new book, Prudence of the Parsonage, a homely, refreshing story of family life. It is as true to a healthy human nature and habits of today as Little Women was in its day.

It is a family book of the best sort, exactly the thing to read aloud in the home circle. There are five children, all girls, to bring up; and Prudence, the oldest, does the mothering. The exploits and adventures keep one on the jump; the table bubbles over with the humor of a typical American family, and a pretty love story is the climax.

do B. M. Keyser, W. Va. "Gentlemen—I was taken sick in November, 1908. I grew steadily worse. Had two operations. The verdict was the fever had affected my lungs and that my case was hopeless. Only one doctor said I could live. My physician had tried months of all kinds of treatment and none did me any good. I was trying to buy a proprietary medicine. I began November 20, 1908, until February 25, 1909, and was thought dying several times. Today I am healthier and stronger than ever." (Abbreviated.)

MANY FANCIERS LIKE JANESVILLE EXHIBIT

EXHIBITORS FROM ALL PARTS OF THE STATE HAVE THEIR PRIZE BIRDS ENTERED.

950 FOWLS DISPLAYED

Two Judges Are Busy Picking Winners From Exceptionally High Class Lot of Exhibits.

The 1916 exhibition of poultry at the Auditorium building which is now in full swing, given under the auspices of the Southern Wisconsin Poultry Association, is the largest ever held in Janesville. There is a grand total of nine hundred and fifty-three birds, which makes it the largest and best show of its kind in the state so far this year. Last year the show had only seven hundred entries. Exhibitors from all parts of Wisconsin and northern Illinois have their birds entered. Even in towns where chicken shows are now in progress, birds have been sent to Janesville, where the owners think the competition will be greater and a better reputation could be gained.

Men who have visited most of the shows in the state declared this morning that they never before have seen so many fancy varieties assembled in one building as they have seen at the Janesville show. Eighty-six owners are represented there by the prize fowls.

Tomorrow afternoon a feature of the day will be a chart lecture by Profes-for J. G. Halpin of the Wisconsin State University. He will explain the different phases in poultry raising and ways to get best results by giving them the correct care. It is expected that many people will be present to hear this instructive talk.

Thursday afternoon is the time set for the annual meeting of the three specialty clubs of the state which are in connection with this exhibition. The Wisconsin Club of the Red Breeders' Club of the World will hold their annual meeting, at which officers will be elected for the coming year. The Wisconsin branch of the International Single Comb Black Minorca club, which is holding its first annual meeting, will also meet here. The other meeting will be that of the Wisconsin Black Orpington club.

Judges Stanford and Laubs are busy today picking out the winners in the different classes. By tomorrow noon it is expected that they will be through so that the winners may be announced. The winners will be presented to the different exhibitors having the best pens of the various types of fowls. One hundred and sixty-three prizes have been offered by the different merchants of the city for winners in the different classes. Some of the special prizes which have been offered are as follows:

A Carriage company offer a $10.00 job of paint (free credit) to the farmer having the largest entry over twenty-five birds.

Ten rods of poultry fence for the best pen in the show.

Charles Riker offers five dollars in gold for the best pen of Houdans.

One electric toaster for the best female bird in the show.

Tough Porch Shade company offers a six dollar hammock for the best male bird in the show.

In the big free contest which occurs every afternoon and evening, persons holding the numbers 21 and 42 will be awarded the prize fowls. The number drawn Tuesday afternoon was 21 and the holder of that number will be awarded a trio of Blue Game fowls donated by H. W. Sheldon. Forty-seven was the one drawn last evening and the person holding that will be awarded a pair of Single Comb White Leghorns. These were donated by W. H. Ashcraft.

History Of the Legion Of Honor For Which All Frenchmen Strive

PAWS, Jan. 19.—The red ribbon on increasing numbers of weather-stained jackets, and the frequent appeals to popular imagination by military parades behind the war zone incidental to the decoration of heroes from the front, have given a remarkable increase in popularity to the Legion of Honor. This imperial institution, handed down through the Restoration, the Second Republic and the Second Empire, was not accepted without reserve by the more democratic Third Republic and has gone through some vicissitudes since.

Napoleon's first idea was to reward military devotion and gallant services on the field of battle. It is only later, when he realized the importance of making war on Great Britain's commerce as well as upon her army and navy, that he used the decoration to incite civilian effort.

Warnings were given at the time that abuses would result. There was no scandal, however, during the Empire and the known traffic in the decoration came to light in 1822, when an agency engaged in the selling of false decorations was unearthed. The scandal of 1857 was more serious, in that case a question arose as to the sale of real decorations, involving a son-in-law of the president of the republic, Jules Grevy, and finally bringing about his resignation.

Some less conspicuous cases have developed since, but the supposition put forth at different times, that the Legion of Honor was always for sale at a price, was probably exaggerated. There was, perhaps, more of a deal to do with the distribution of the honor among classes.

At its origin the Legion of Honor comprised a Grand Council or directory, composed of seven grand officers and sixteen cohorts, each cohort counting seven grand officers, twenty commandants, thirty officers and 250 legionaries named for life by the grand council. The grand council and the cohorts were suppressed by a law reorganizing in 1818, and the dispositions of that law were mostly incorporated into the present charter of the order, which dates from March 16, 1818. The president of the republic is the Grand Master of the Legion of Honor, whose affairs are now administered by a Grand Chancellor named by the chief executive of the republic, and a council of the order comprising a General Secretary, Vice President and two members. The corps of legionaries is composed of Chevaliers, Officers, Commandants, Grand Officers and Grand Crosses. The membership is limited to twenty Grand Crosses, fifty Grand Officers, 250 Commandants, 2,000 Officers and 2,000 Chevaliers or Knights. Foreigners who are decorated are conferred do not figure in this limited membership, according to the rules.

A time of peace to be admitted to the Legion of Honor must have exercised civilian or military functions during twenty years with honor and distinction. To be promoted to any rank superior to that of Knight, it is indispensable to have passed through the grade immediately inferior. The period of four years as a Knight, two years as an Officer, three years as a Commandant, five years as a Grand Officer. For exceptional cases of gallantry or extraordinary services in time of war or during these periods may be reduced, but in no case may a Knight be advanced to the grade of Commandant without having first been promoted to the rank of Officer.

The decoration of the Legion of Honor is a five double-pointed star with a medallion in the center with the head of the republic in relief, and the words: French Republic, 1870. In a circular border, on the other side the medallion bears the tricolor flag with the device, "Honneur et Patrie." The star which is encircled in white is of silver for the Knights, and of gold for the Officers. The only distinction made in the form of the decoration itself for the different ranks is that of size, being one and one-third inches in diameter for the Knights and Officers, and two and one-half inches in diameter for the Commandants. The Knights wear the decoration on the left side of the chest, attached to a red moire ribbon. The Officers wear the same piece and with the same ribbon, but with a red rosette attached. Commandants wear the decoration around their neck attached to a red moire ribbon wider than that of Officers and Knights. Grand Officers in addition to the cross wear on the left side of the breast a five double-pointed star with diamonds. The Grand Crosses wear the decoration attached to a red sash passing over the right shoulder and also on the left side of the chest another double-pointed star similar to that of the Grand Officers.

It is not generally known that membership in the Legion of Honor carries with it a pension to soldiers or officers who have lost a limb or have lost the use of a member as a result of wounds received in battle. Knights receive 250 francs a year. Officers, 500 francs. Commandants, 1,000 francs. Grand Officers, 2,000 francs and Grand Crosses, 3,000 francs.

Membership in the Legion of Honor is lost for the same causes that a man is said to lose his civic rights, that is to say, conviction for a criminal offense or in case of bankruptcy.

The palace of the Legion of Honor, called generally "The Chancellery," is a beautiful building on the left bank of the Seine, facing the Tuilleries Gardens. The original structure was erected between 1782 and 1789 by Rousseau for the Prince Frederic de Salm-Kyrburg. It was inhabited by Madame de Stael for a time and was bought by the Legion of Honor in 1804 to be used as headquarters of the order and the residence of the Chancellor. Burned during the Commune in 1871, it was rebuilt on the original plans, by voluntary subscription of members of the order. In the Salons of the palace are gathered a great many interesting works of art, among them a splendid full life portrait of the First Consul by Yvon, an apotheosis of Napoleon by Maillet, and a ceiling by P. Laurens representing the creation of the Legion of Honor.

Besides pensions to crippled members, the Legion of Honor educates the daughters of its legionaries in three different institutions, the original of which was established at Ecourt, in 1805. The second was organized in the ancient abbey at Denis in 1808 and became the principal institution. Others were founded at Saint Denis, Ecom and des Loges. Each institution has accommodations for 400 free places for daughters of members with the rank of Captain or equivalent, without fortunes. Daughters, granddaughters, sisters and nieces of members are admitted to 75 places in each institution at the expense of the family. The date of admission is from 9 to 12 years of age and the girls graduate in seven years.

ROYAL FAMILY COLLECT WOOL FOR SOLDIERS

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Salonki, Jan. 19.—Prince Andrew, the brother of King Constantine, has as his wife the English Princess Alice of Battenberg, who has made herself the head of a homely, practical charity known as "The Soldiers' Flannel." In the front room of the dolt-house of a Turkish villa where Prince Andrew and his wife live at Salonki, there is such an increasing quantity of wool in packages, bales and skeins that the room begins to look like a warehouse. It is all a part of the Princess's scheme to keep the Greek soldier supplied with the flannels that he needs for the winter.

"You see," explained in English with the slight German accent that is characteristic of all Battenbergs, "Macedonia is cold and damp and not the least like the warm dry climate of the rest of Greece. With the mobilization of our army from other parts of Greece where the climate is like that of Rome or Washington, numbers of men have been thrown into Macedonia who are not at all accustomed to the snow and the Vardar wind. In great part, they are small farmers who get on with very little in the way of clothing, where they are ordinarily living they do not need any underwear and the uniforms they take with them into Macedonia are also comparatively light. The average Greek soldier cannot buy the things he needs to keep him warm and even when he has the money he is likely to find the price of such things in Salonki has soared to a very high and unstable height. So we have started this plan of clothing them."

Already we have distributed 20,000 articles of flannel of one sort or another since the mobilization, but that is not a drop in the bucket beside what we shall be wanting before the winter is over."

The Princess Alice is very keenly interested in the present situation of her brothers in the British navy. One of them, Prince George, was on the New Zealand at the time of the fight with the German Blücher and it was his ship that saved the Princess, that gave the finishing shot to the German warship. Her cousin, Maurice, was killed fighting with the British in Flanders in October and his two remaining brothers are also soldiers in the British army.

Prince Andrew was formerly a captain of Grecian cavalry, and the Princess is quite certain that if he goes to war she will be with her husband in the field. The life of a soldier is no new thing to her, for she has followed Prince Andrew in two campaigns, living in tents, riding over the Macedonian mountains, helping and encouraging the soldiers.

National Drainage Congress Holds Convention Which Opens This Afternoon.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Cairo, Ill., Jan. 19.—The National Drainage Congress, advocating national legislation for flood protection and reclamation of swamp and overflowed lands, begins a three-day convention at Cairo this afternoon. This is the sixth annual meeting of the congress since its organization in Chicago in December, 1911.

The president of the congress, E. J. Watson of Columbia, S. C., state commissioner of agriculture, commerce and industries, will be unable to attend, and the meeting will be presided over by First Vice President Frank H. Knight of Chicago, Edmund T. Perkins of Chicago, formerly of the United States reclamation service, is chairman of the committee on arrangements.

The meeting this afternoon will hear addresses of welcome by Mayor Wood, Vice President Knight and Governor Edward F. Dunne of Illinois. Thomas H. Farmer of Martin, Tenn., will then discuss, "How Can the Mississippi River be Improved to Secure the Best Facilities for Commerce and Drainage?" Tonight there will be a smoker, preceded by two hours of the Pittsburgh flood commission by E. K. Morse, engineer of that commission, and one on the Mississippi River and its Control, by J. K. ## FORTY YEARS AGO

The Janesville Daily Gazette, Jan. 19, 1876.—The circuit court is still absorbed in the windmill case, and the end is not yet. The remark of the judge is quite to the point in this case it seems, when he said that it appeared as if each of the attorneys had a windmill.
Burr Robbins is the happiest man in the city today. He is the father of a fine eight pound daughter.
William B. Baines, a farmer living near the city, sold yesterday forty-nine hogs, the average weight of which, three hundred and five pounds each for the handsome sum of $1,047.00. He raised seventy-five acres of corn during the past season and after fattening fifty hogs has three hundred bushels in the crib and has sixty-two hogs left to consume it. This is the system of farming well deserving consideration.
The city council met last night. They received a report from the special committee on the water works and the Monterey bridge matter.

Something To Do

Conducted By A. S. BENNETT

Something To Cut And Paste

Animal Window Cards or Magic Lantern Pictures

The Gay Geese

Copy this drawing very large on a piece of drawing paper. Paste your drawing on a piece of cardboard or strong paper. When thoroughly dry and smooth, cut away all the black parts with a sharp penknife or pointed scissors. What are the peculiar characteristics of geese? Try to remember the different parts as you cut them out. Be very careful not to break the white pieces which connect the various outlines. After cutting, paste narrow pieces of colored tissue paper back of the openings as follows:
Eyes, bills, and legs of orange yellow; two of the geese white, the other goose black. Place in front of the light.
